The Ring . . . by Arthur A. Bressi

. . . a true story about how a class ring saved the life of a 1970 graduate's father during World War II . . .

By all the rules, Skinner was a dead man. I stood at the wire fence at the Japanese prisoner-of war camp on Luxon and watched my boyhood buddy, caked in filth and wracked by the pain of nearly half a dozen diseases, totter toward me.

He was dead, only his boisterous spirit hadn't yet left his body. I wanted to look away but couldn't. His blue eyes, watery and dulled, locked on me and wouldn't let go.

It was mid-afternoon, quiet, hot, with the sun glowing in a cloudless sky. The black Navy neckerchief I wore around my neck to collect perspiration hung with a heavy knot against my chest, for inside that knot was concealed my greatest treasure. It was the only thing of value the Japanese had not been able to lift from me.

I felt that knot, and my mind slipped back to another afternoon three years earlier on the day of graduation from high school in Mount Carmel, Pennsylvania. I dashed up to Skinner, or Howard William Ayres, and showed him my glittering new class ring. I was as proud of that ring as the diploma I would receive. For months I had done odd jobs to earn money for it. The ring cost $8.75 and represented a bigger thrill than anything I have bought since. This treasure, I swore, I would never part with.

Skinner and I had been fast buddies all through school in Mount Carmel. We played hookey together. When there was mischief to get into, there was Skinner with me right alongside. We roamed the nearby mountains together and double-dated together. He had a capacity for smiling, laughing and living fully every moment.

Early in 1940 we enlisted in the Army and rode the same troopship to the Philippines. He was on Bataan when it fell to the Japs in April, 1942, and participated in the infamous Death March to Luzon. Corregidor, where I was stationed, fell a month later.

At the surrender I grew preoccupied with my class ring. The Japanese, were taking everything of value from captured Americans. They were efficient; if a soldier couldn't get his ring off, the Japs chopped off his finger with a sword. I almost had given up finding a hiding place when I thought of the Navy neckerchief I had purloined some time ago. Quickly I loosened the knot, slipped the ring inside, tightened the knot, and waited.

It worked. Everything else I had of value was taken.

Months followed. Skinner and I lost touch in the constant enforced shifting among prison camps. Did Skinner survive the Death March? If so, did he survive the hell of Camp O'Donnell, where up to 400 prisoners from Bataan were dying daily? I lost hope of ever seeing him again.

Then, through the prisoner-of-war grapevine, I learned that Skinner was at Camp 1, only some six miles from where I was held in Camp 3, Camp 1 was near Cabanatuan, not far from Lingayen Gulf.

All thought now was concentrated on getting to see him again, to find out what condition he was in. I had heard he was in the "sick side" of Camp 1. But to ask to visit another camp was to ask for a bayonet in the stomach.

Healthy prisoners were pressed into work details on a quota basis, although prisoners often volunteered for them to escape the monotony of camp, and also with the hope of getting bits of food and clothing from friendly Filipinos along the way. I volunteered for one, not knowing where it would go but hoping it would pass through Camp 1.

It did. Could I visit the sick side? I asked the Jap guards. They gave me a white flag, mounted on a bamboo pole, and a pass.

Walk slowly, they said. Carry the flag high or be shot. Carry the pass high in the other hand or be clubbed.

The sick side was divided in two sections, one for those expected to recover; and the "Zero Ward" for those expected to die. Skinner, I heard, was one of the four in the Zero Ward.

The four, I learned, were lying in their own filth, too weak to care to move, too full of tropic-induced sores in their mouths to eat, and waiting for the inevitable end.

Leaning against the barbed wire enclosing the barracks that contained the Zero Ward, I yelled, "Skinner, hey Skinner."

I listened while other prisoners relayed his name.

Out of the barracks, tottering slowly, painfully, came the wreckage of a human body I didn't at first recognize.

"Artie," rasped the emaciated body.

He fell against the fence, grasped it with both hands and clung to keep from falling.

I tried to conceal my horror. This was Skinner!

Recollection today of what we said is mostly lost, except that we seemed to deliberately confine it to trivia. The words flowed haltingly, while my mind spun in desperate tangles to think of something, anything, I could do to help my buddy.

When we last saw each other Skinner packed a solid 214 pounds. His skin now was drawn tight over a skeleton that weighed 79 pounds. He was in agony from malaria, amoebic dysentry, pellegra, scurvy and beri-beri. The Japs had been giving him burned rice and charcoal in a futile effort to halt the dysentry. But he couldn't eat or drink, for the pain in his mouth and throat. He was given no food — there was no point in wasting food on a dying man — except some evaporated milk and some rice soup that contained no kernels of rice. He couldn't wash himself, and no Jap guards would; he was covered with scabs.

My hand found its way to the knot on my neckerchief, and my fingers played with the hard lump inside. The ring.

I froze. My heart pounded. I had been allowed only about five minutes to be with Skinner, and the time was almost up.

My eyes darted along the fence. No guards were in sight.

Quickly I unslipped the knot and passed the ring through the fence.

"It's yours now, Skinner," I said. "Maybe you can wheel and deal it for something."

I had sworn three years earlier I would never part with that ring. Before I saw Skinner I felt I might have to wheel and deal my own way out of a tight spot. I weighed then only about 20 pounds below normal, but while I was considered healthy, I had picked up some traces of dysentry, malaria and beri-beri. The future, while I didn't know it then, saw these diseases getting worse, with the addition of pallegra, scurvy, and what American physicians later said was a possible trace of trachoma.

But standing at the fence I was relatively healthy. And Skinner was only a step from eternity.

"Artie," he said, trying to pass the ring back, "you ought to hang on to this."

"I'll make out."

"You'll need this some day yourself, to wheel and deal it."

"Keep it," I commanded. "maybe it will help you out of the hole you're in."

All this while Skinner had been hanging onto the fence with both hands, to take weight off his legs and keep from collasping. He wrapped bony fingers tightly around the ring, and promised that someday he would buy me another exactly like it.

Time was up. I turned to go. Off in the distance I saw the cemetery for the Zero Warders.

Six months later, press-ganged into working on an airstrip near Manila, I broke down physically. Apparently my Jap guards thought that a live laborer was better than a dead one, for they sent me to a sick ward. I could have used that ring then, for the extra insurance it would have brought in terms of extra medicine and food.

Meanwhile, the days and weeks that followed for Skinner contained an incredible sequence of near miracles. I learned of them only after the war.

Among the Japanese guards at the Zero Ward was a middle-aged fellow who displayed a prominent gold tooth at the rare intervals he smiled.

One day before my visit with Skinner this guard had stood at the fence, looking in, and shaking his head.

"Damei," he had said. "Very bad."

Deathly afraid of being seen by a superior, the guard had looked in all directions, then beckoned Skinner. He had taken a cigarette, broken it in half, and dropped one of the halves with a match alongside the fence. He then shouldered his rifle and continued his patrol.

In the days that had followed, the guard had grown bolder and dropped other cigarettes and pieces of candy. At great risk, Skinner and this guard managed to communicate in combination of sign language, and an improvised language of Japanese, pidgin and English.

Skinner did wheel and deal that ring. He bought his life.

Returning to his sleeping area after my visit, he hid it overnight under the barracks floor so inspection parties would not find it.

Next day he took one of the biggest risks of his captivity.

Weighing all the odds of being caught with a valuable item against getting in return nothing at all, or at most, a few more pieces of candy, he decided to trust the Japanese guard.

The moment arrived when he took that chance. He beckoned the guard, then passed the ring through the fence.

This guard, too old for front line service, could expect none of the loot combatants stole from dead Americans. He fingered the ring.

"Ichi-ban?" he asked. "Is it valuable?"

Of great value, Skinner replied. He said he wanted to trade it for — for anything — to help him.

"Where did you get it?" demanded the guard.

Skinner shrugged. "Tomodatchi." "From a friend."

Quickly the guard slipped the ring into a pocket and left.

One day soon the guard beckoned again, dropped something, then strode off on patrol. Skinner picked up a small packet. He opened it carefully, and his blood raced. Inside were sulfanilamide tablets.

The guard visited again and again. Each time he brought something. One day it was a small basket of limes, to combat scurvy and pellagra. Another time it was a pair of pants and a jacket. Again, bananas. Then pickled radishes.

Brought were food stuffs from the Canadian Red Cross, and canned beef. Further visits brought khaki shorts, a shirt, shoes, a neckerchief, "and the damndest hat ever."

Once the guard dropped 20 packs of cigarettes. Skinner wheeled and dealed these with other prisoners for rice — prisoners who retched every time they tried to eat rice, and who succumbed to a despondency where starvation with cigarettes was preferable to starvation with the pain of retching.

Skinner could eat now, and retain what went down. The sulfanilamide pills were smothering the diseases in his body; and the limes, three days after he began eating them, had healed the sores in his mouth sufficiently to chew food.

Soon he was on his feet and strong enough to bathe.

The guard, arrogant when superiors were in the vicinity, grew friendlier when unobserved. He didn't like war, he told Skinner. He talked about the United States. He talked about his family and home; he grinned a goldtoothed smile and showed Skinner pictures of his wife and daughter.

In their improvised language Skinner also found how the guard was getting some of the staples.

Another American prisoner, a buddy of both of us, drove a truck on Japanese work details. He got to villages where he picked up produce, some of which he secreted for his own use. His rounds placed him in contact with the Zero Ward guard, and from whom he learned of Skinner's condition. He gave the guard some of his own hoard for Skinner.

The driver never returned from the war. We never learned whether he died in a prison camp, was killed for hiding food, or drowned in a torpedoed "hell ship" in which American prisoners, packed like sardines, were evacuated to the Japanese home islands.

Three weeks after I passed my prized ring through the fence, I was to learn three years later, that Skinner was on his feet, and after three months was "bouncing around."

He was moved to the "well side" of the camp. There he got better rations. He put on weight and regained muscle tone. When his weight went up to a bearable 125 pounds he asked for a work detail.

Shortly after the war I was in a truck convoy carrying released American prisoners to a depot in Manila. Another convoy, headed for the piers and ships bound for the States, was passing us. A traffic jam developed and both convoys stopped momentarily.

I recognized a buddy in the other convoy. "Lew" I called. Though fearful of the answer, I had to ask, "have you seen Skinner?"

"Yeah, Artie, he's on the truck just ahead of me."

I wanted to jump out and run to him, pump his hand, and slap him on the back, to see for myself the proof that he was among the living.

Just then the traffic jam became unscrambled, trucks ground into gear and began moving. "Lew," I shouted, "tell him I'm O.K., and that I'll see him when I get home."

Sixty-nine months after I had enlisted I was back in Mount Carmel. I had been home only a few hours when the doorbell rang. In came Skinner. Within a few days, he said, he would return; his eyes contained the old boyish merriment and a twinkle that he was holding something back.

On his next visit Skinner sat opposite me in the living room. "Art," he said, audibly repressing emotion, "as far as I know, I am the only American who ever left the Zero Ward alive.

"You remember when you left me at the fence? No man ever looked at me the way you did, and I hope no one ever does again." Your eyes said "I'll never see old Skinner alive again."

Skinner fumbled in his pocket and brought out a little box. I quickened, for I knew what was inside. He tossed it to me. It held an exact copy of my high school ring.

Skinner looked out the window, his face haunted with memory. "That ring Artie. You . . . it . . . saved my life. I promised I would get you a new one. There it is!"

But the irrepressible Skinner, the kid who could think up countless ways to play hookey and get away with it, suddenly laughed. "And see that you don't lose it, buddy. I had to shell out $17.50 for it."

Lose it? Never. It is in a special jewelry box, locked up, and hidden.

Within the pages of this book, you will find our recordings of the progress, acquaintances, and achievements of the graduating class of 1970.

As we turn each page, it will recall to mind our many friends, teachers, classrooms, and activities that were once familiar and dear to us.

It is our one desire that this Carmelite will enable us to remember the past and strive for a better future.

The Class Of 1970 —

Sitting. B. L. Saduskie, sec., B. Britt, pres. Standing. T. Michaliga, vice pres., R. Kornacki, treas.

As we, the Class of 1970, leave the halls of M.C.A.H.S., let us look back at the fond memories of our high school years.

There was the sophomore card campaign followed by the junior magazine drive — two successful projects under the capable leadership of our class advisors.

Our class shall always remember our great senior year. It was the year of our Eastern Conference football champs, and also a successful year for the band. There were the pep rallies, the assemblies, the excitement of the Valley View game, and, of course, the prom.

Now, as the time comes for us to step out on our own, we look at our past with pride and to our future with confidence.

Class Colors: ice blue & white
Class Flower: red rose
Class Motto: "Less than our best is failure."
Class Song: (Tune: "Let There Be Peace on Earth" Words by Kay Rothermel)

Dear old Mt. Carmel High
You now have fulfilled your goal.
In every way of life,
You've taught us all we must know
To live in this great world,
To make the future bright.
We have learned from your teachings
To live the way that's right.
Now as we leave your halls,
And go on to future ways,
We'll ne'er forget the fun
We've had in our high school days.

We'll take the wisdom
You've tried to give us
And share with everyone.
Dear old Mt. Carmel High
We thank you for all you've done.

Our Class Advisors

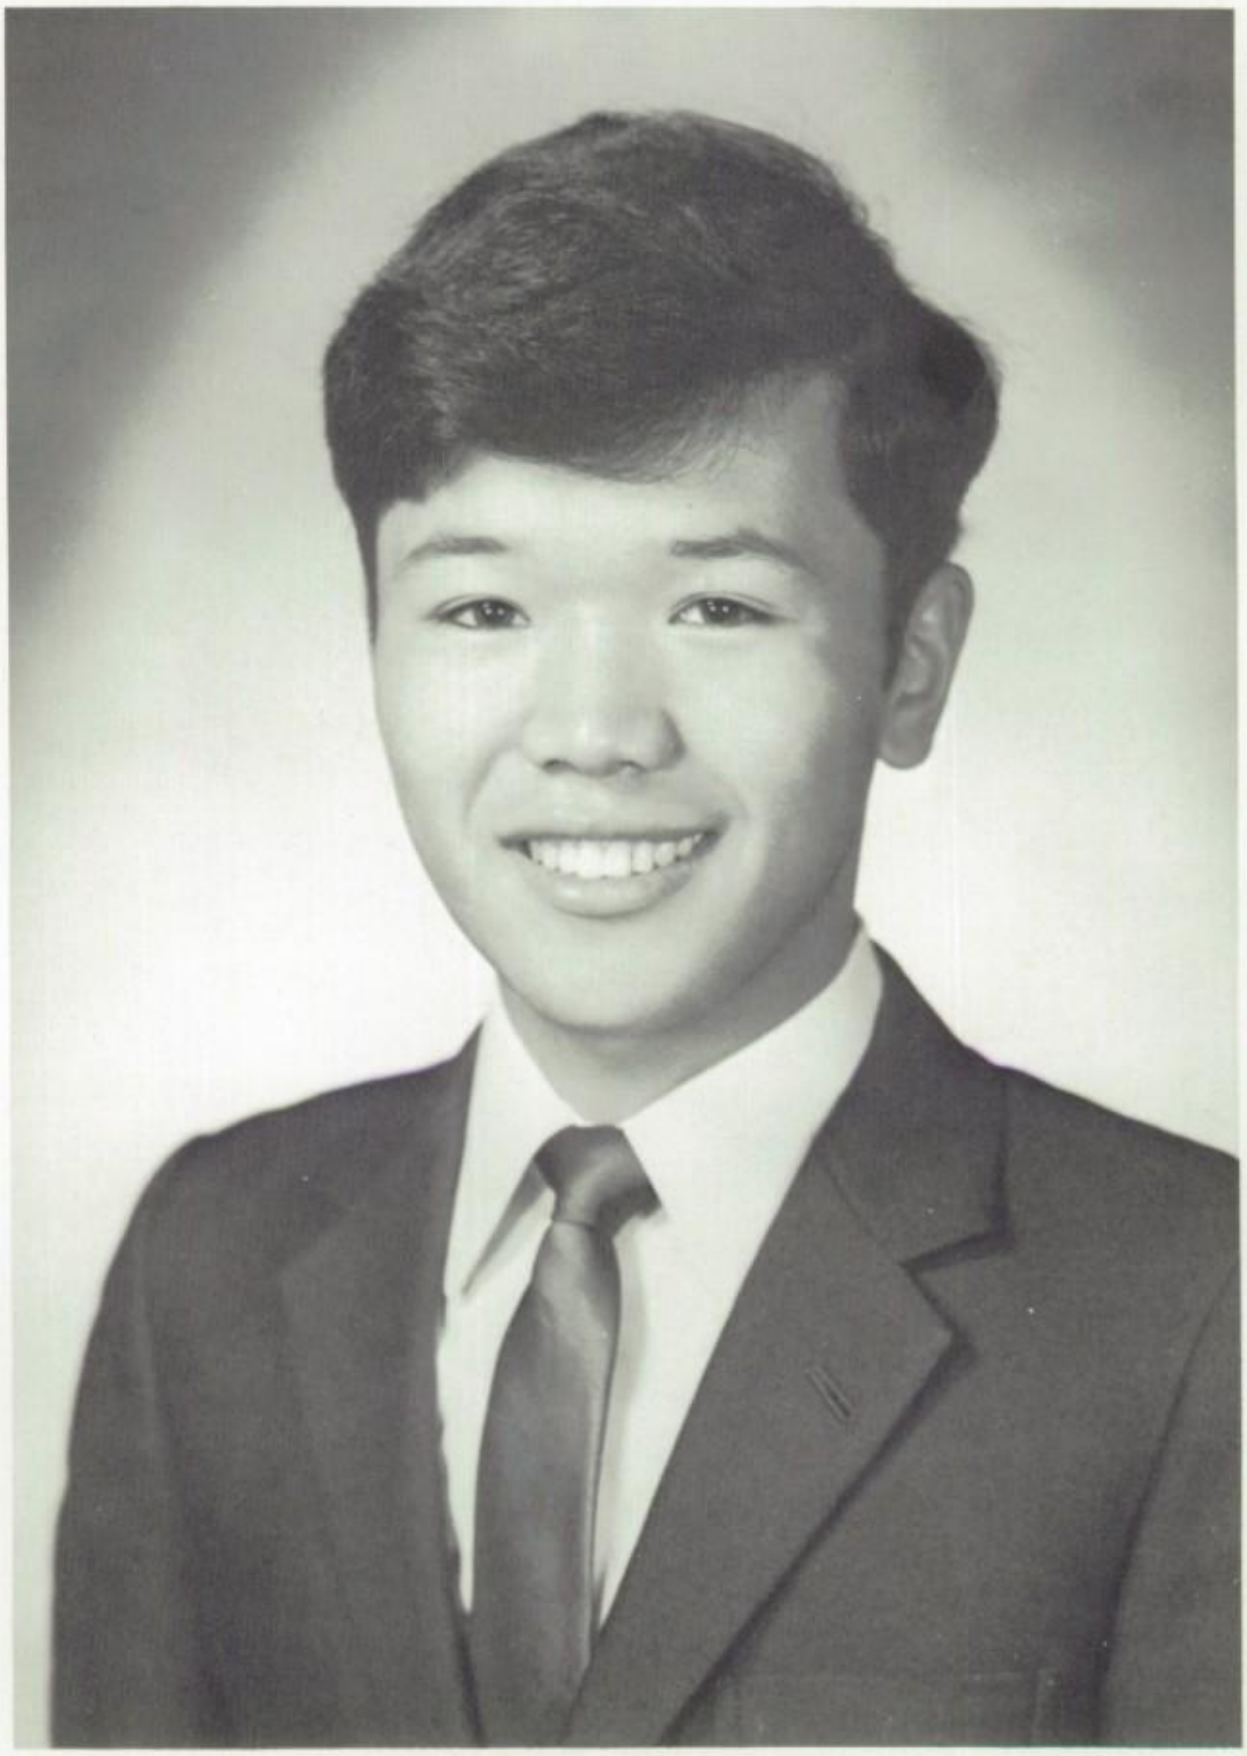
Mrs. Eleanor Shields

Mr. Richard Profit

As we walk the last time through the halls of our school, we turn to take one long last look at all we must leave behind us. The familiar surroundings echo back the knowledge we gained, strides we took, pleasant memories we have, and past accomplishments we attained. But, we must also remember that many of these would not have been possible if not for the patience and guidance offered to us by our class advisors — Mrs. John Shields and Mr. Richard Profit.

So we, the Class of 1970, would like to dedicate this publication to them in the fond hope that it may, if even only in a small way, express our heartfelt thanks for all they have done for us.

Our Exchange Student From Japan . . .



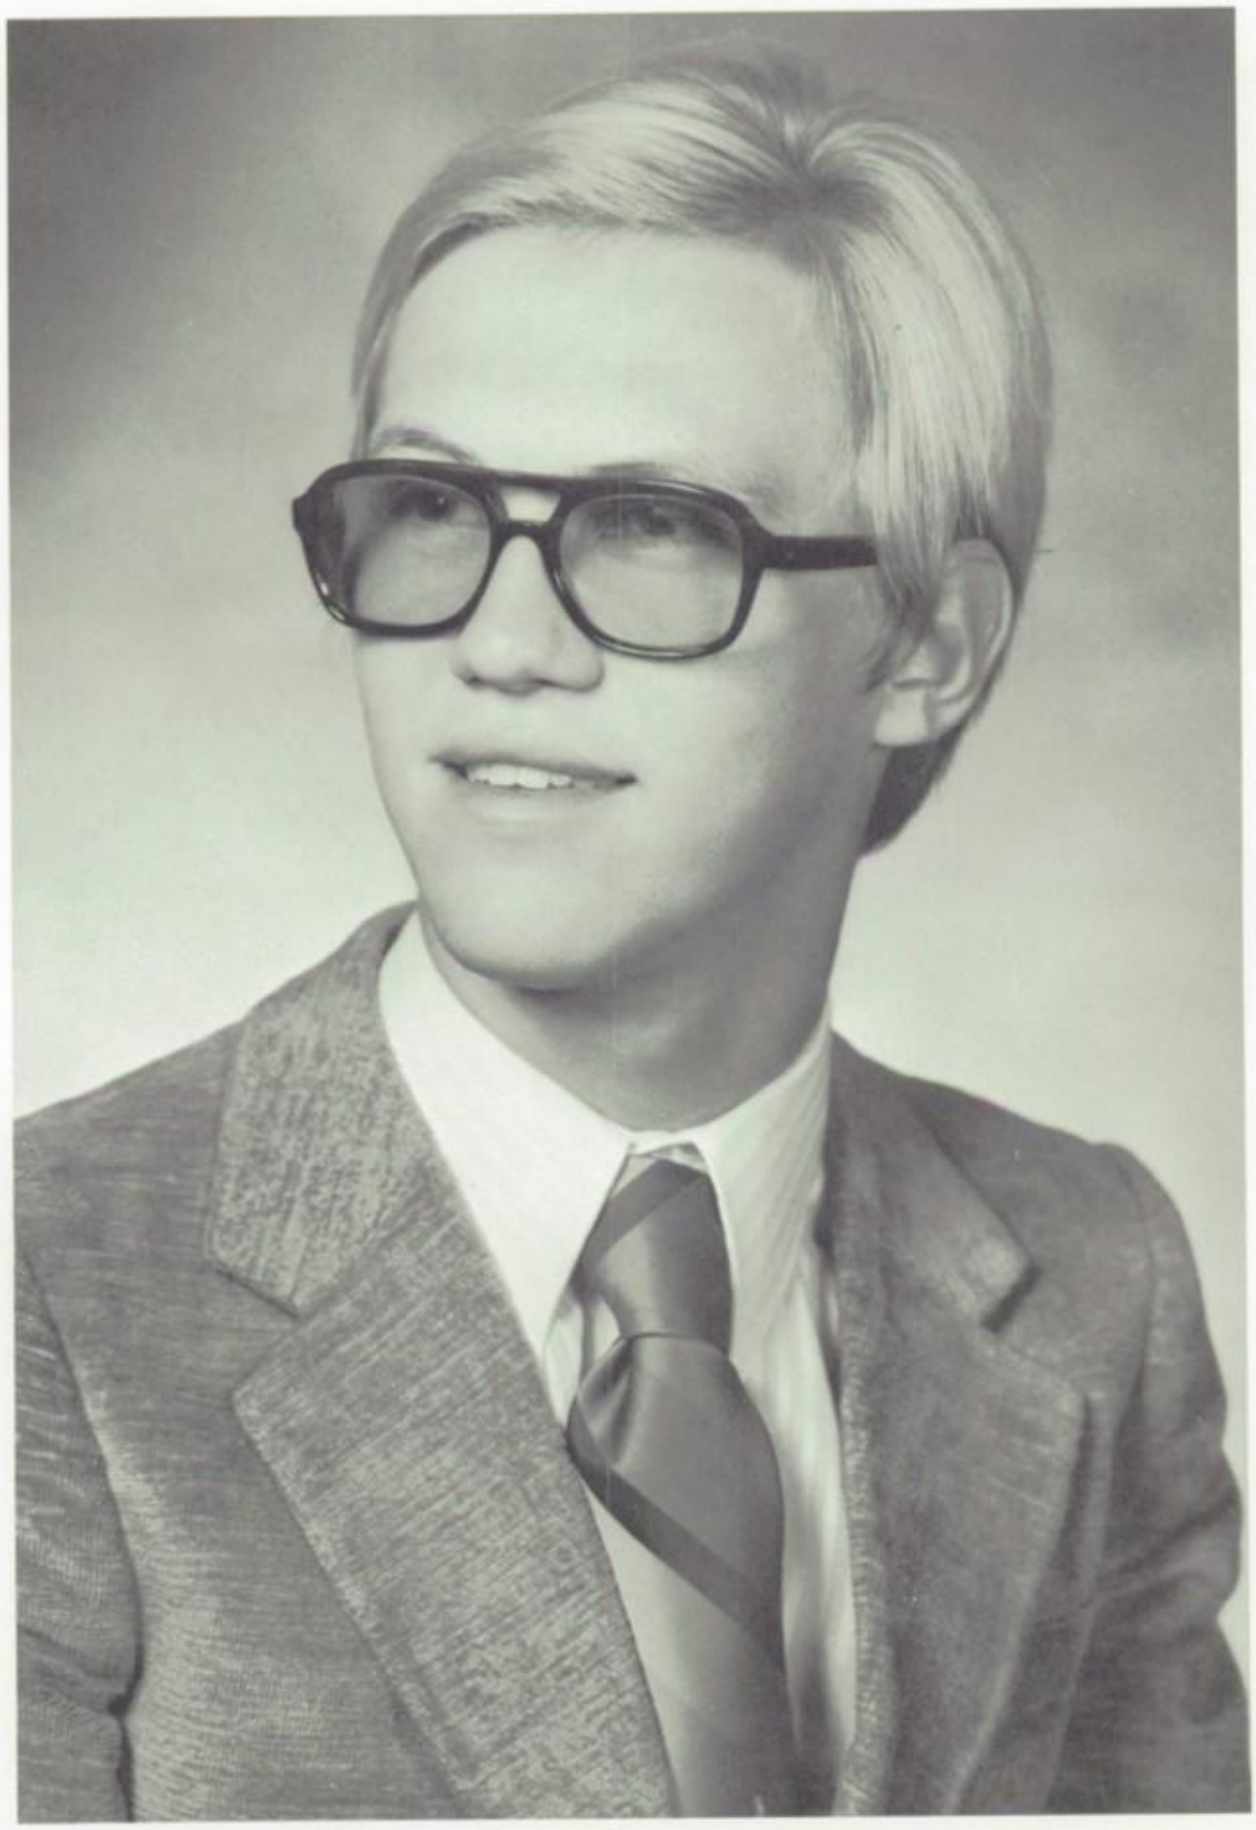
Yutaka Ito, better known to us as "Yubo", is our first Rotary Exchange student from Japan. His hometown of Sendai is an education center.

"Yubo's" father, Choujiro Ito, is the president of a small pipe-insulation firm. His mother is a housewife, and he has a sister, Keiko Ito, who is nine years old.

"Yubo" is fond of American football, wrestling, and American life. He thinks Mount Carmel is a very pretty town and would like to come back to visit after his return to Japan.

We extend our best wishes to our Japanese friend, and hope he has enjoyed his visit to M.C.A.H.S.

Our Exchange Student From Sweden . . .



Lars Magni Noren, one of the two Rotary Exchange Students at M.C.A.H.S. this year, arrived in Mount Carmel on August 5, 1969. He comes from Hosslehom, Sweden, which is an industrial city and a railroad center. Lars' father is the owner of a clothing factory and his mother is a clothes designer. He has one sister who is presently studying in Switzerland.

Concerning his future plans, Lars says he is interested in business. After he returns to Sweden, he will have two years left in Gymnasium, which is equivalent to our Junior College. He already operates his own clothing store, which is a good foundation for his future.

Lars said he was most impressed by the friendliness of the Mount Carmel Area people, and he has enjoyed himself tremendously.

We extend our best wishes to him and hope that his stay in Mount Carmel will remain a memorable experience.

About Your School District . . .

The Mount Carmel Joint Senior High School came into being on October 1, 1951, when the school boards of Mount Carmel Borough and Mount Carmel Township signed a ten year contract, forming a joint school district of grades one to twelve inclusive. The senior high school enrollment at the time of the jointure was: Mount Carmel Borough 442, Mount Carmel Township 146, making a total of 586 pupils. Centralia became a member of the Jointure in 1963. Kulpmont and Marion Heights became jointure members in June, 1964.

On August 31, 1964, Mount Carmel Area Senior High School housed the eleventh and twelfth; Roosevelt Area High School, ninth and tenth. Franklin D. Roosevelt Area Junior High School in Kulpmont, seventh and eighth grades.

In July 1964, the name of the high school was changed to the Mount Carmel Area Senior High School. On July 1, 1965, under advanced establishment, the area school board of nine members became the official governing body.

What, cupcakes??!

The Water Boilers . . .

Home Economics

Mrs. Regina Mehlbaum

Oooo . . . what's brewing?

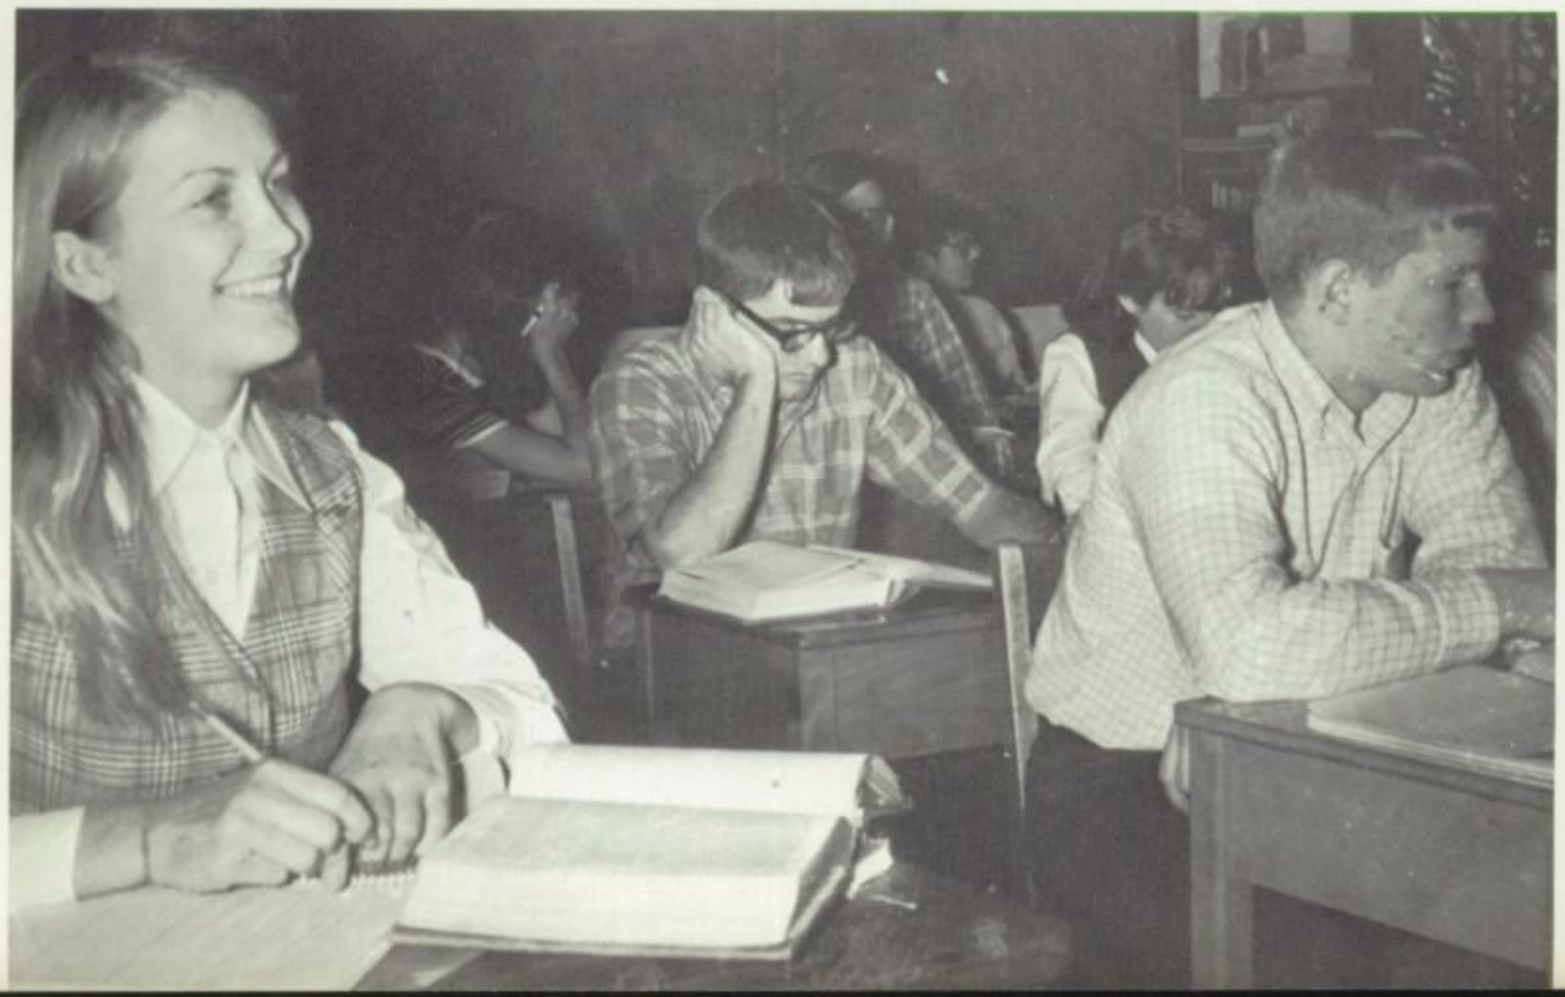
Miss Virginia Kachel

Mrs. Thelma Snyder

Mr. James Sheehan

Mrs. Mary Sawicki

Smile, you're on candid camera!!



That really racked your brain, huh Teddy?

A.E.I.O. — Who?

The English Department

Boy this reeks!

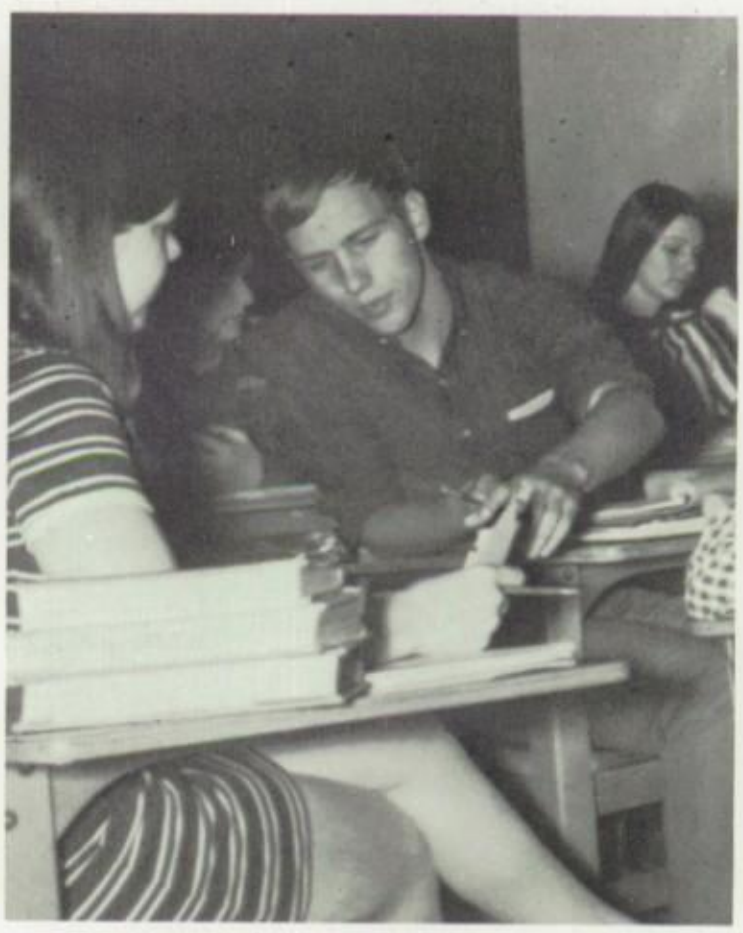
And what are you laughing about, Grec?

The World Around Us . . .

We use Ultra-Brite!!

Mah Fellow Americans . . .

Spiro who?



History was never so interesting, was it, Dennis?

Social Studies

Almost everybody seems interested . . . right Tom?

Dave, you're such a brownie!

Gee, I wish we were back in Georgia!

Mr. Gerald Breslin

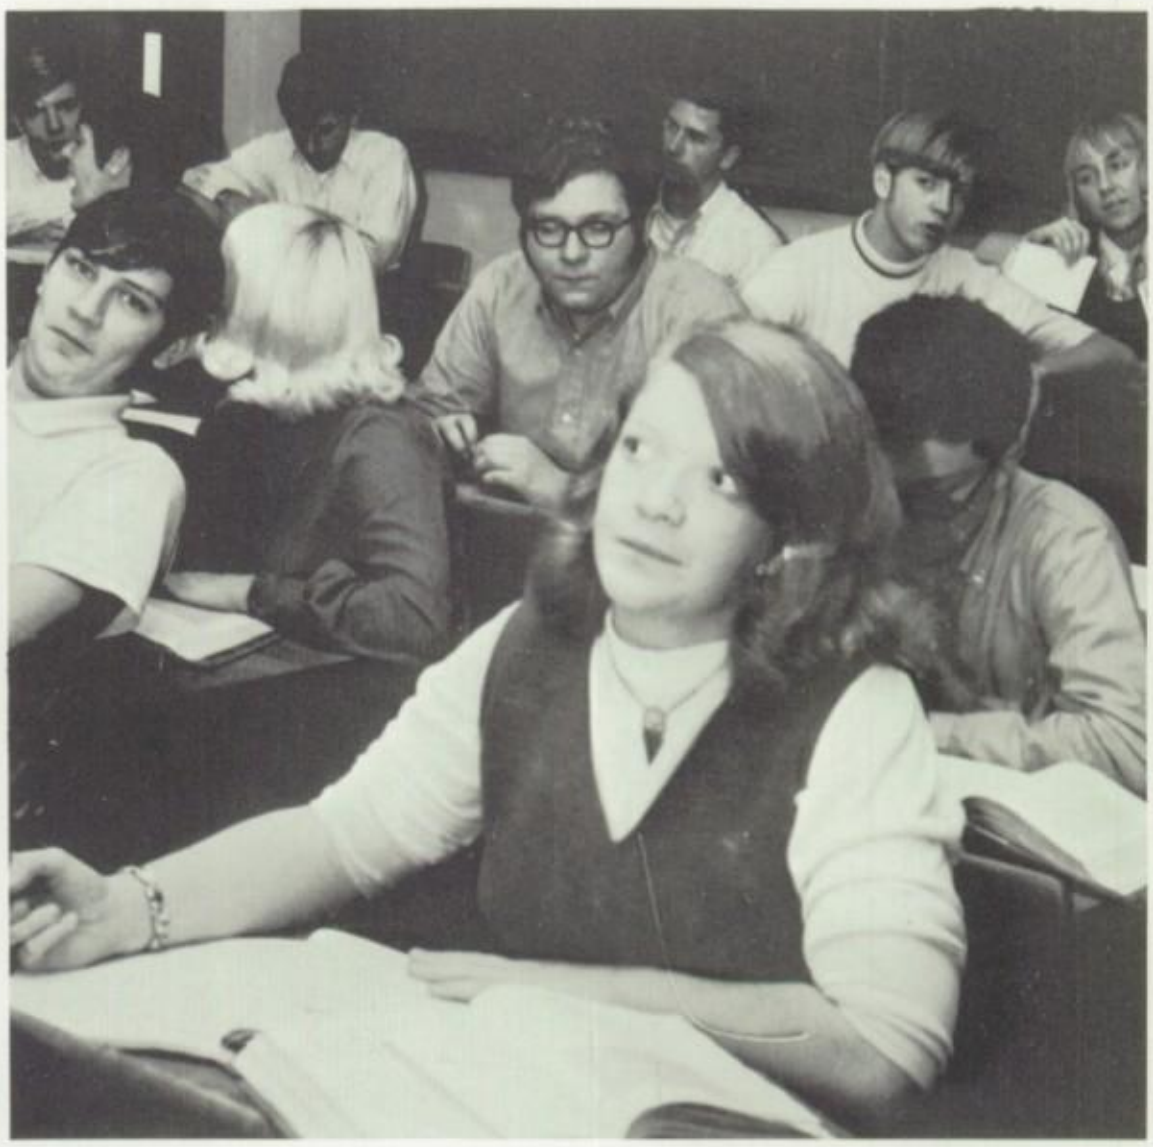
Mr. Glenn Menges

Mr. Thomas Vernon

Mrs. Eleanore Shields

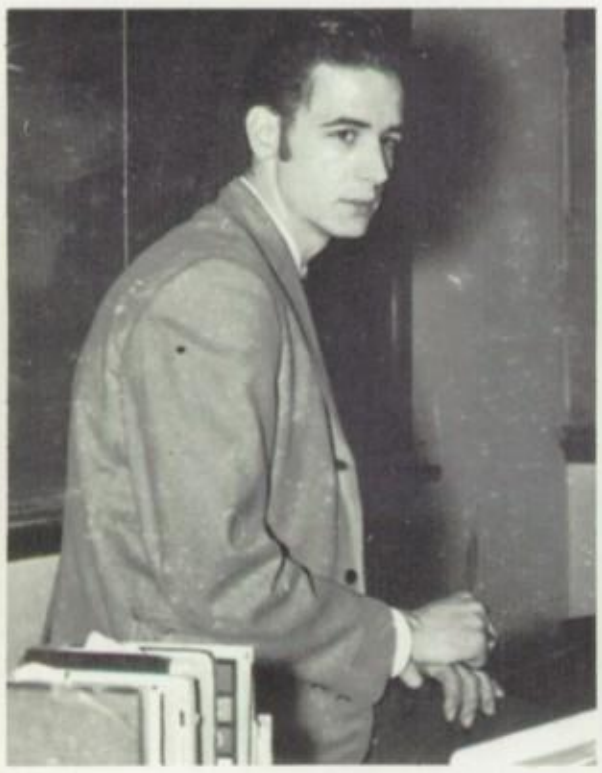
2 + 2 = ?

Mr. Joseph Swatski

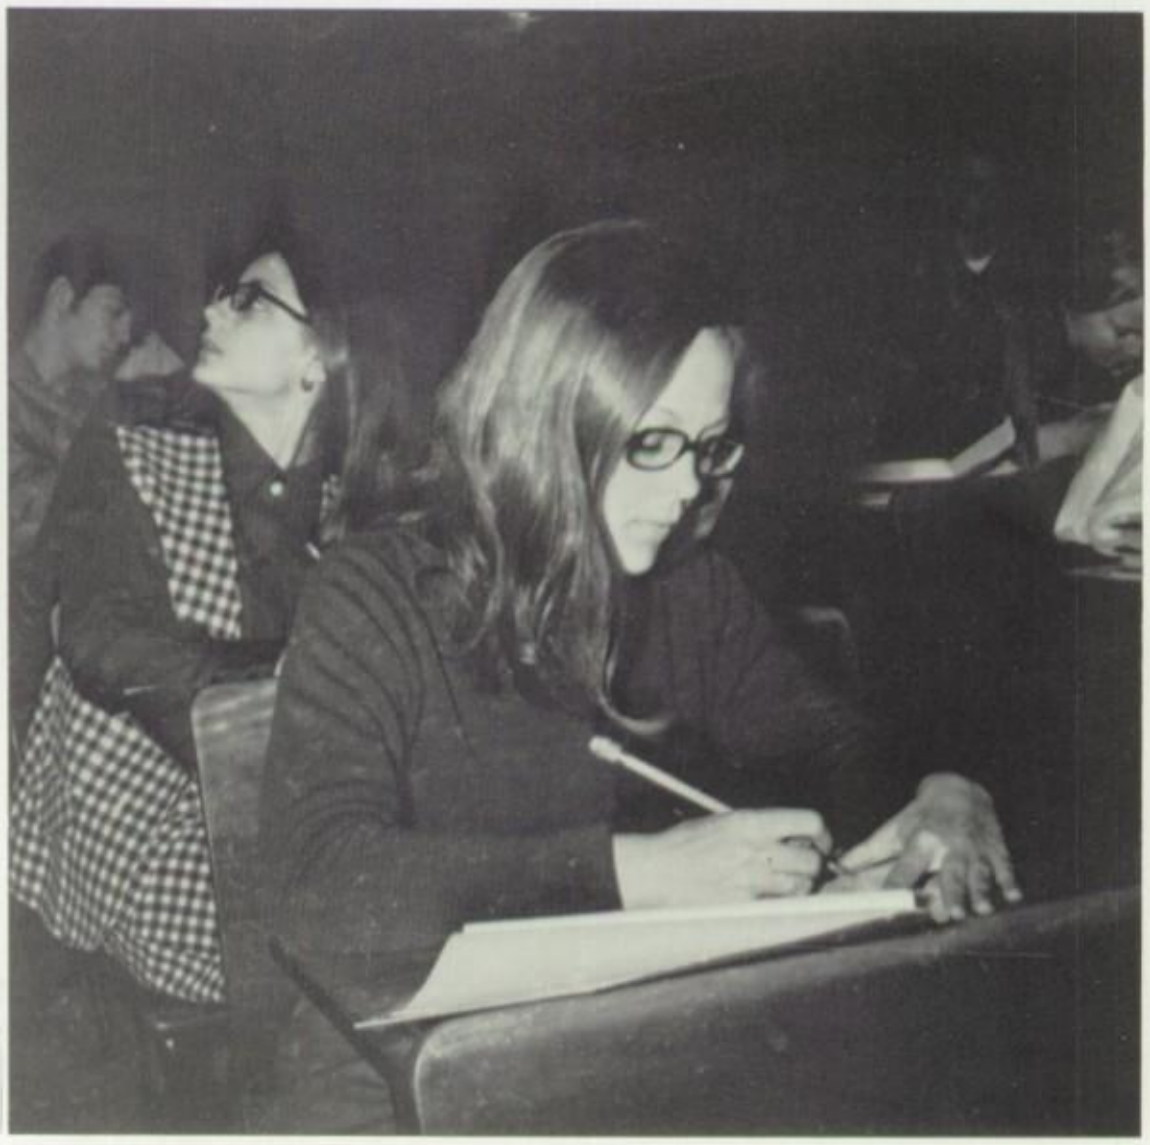


What are ya? Crazy?

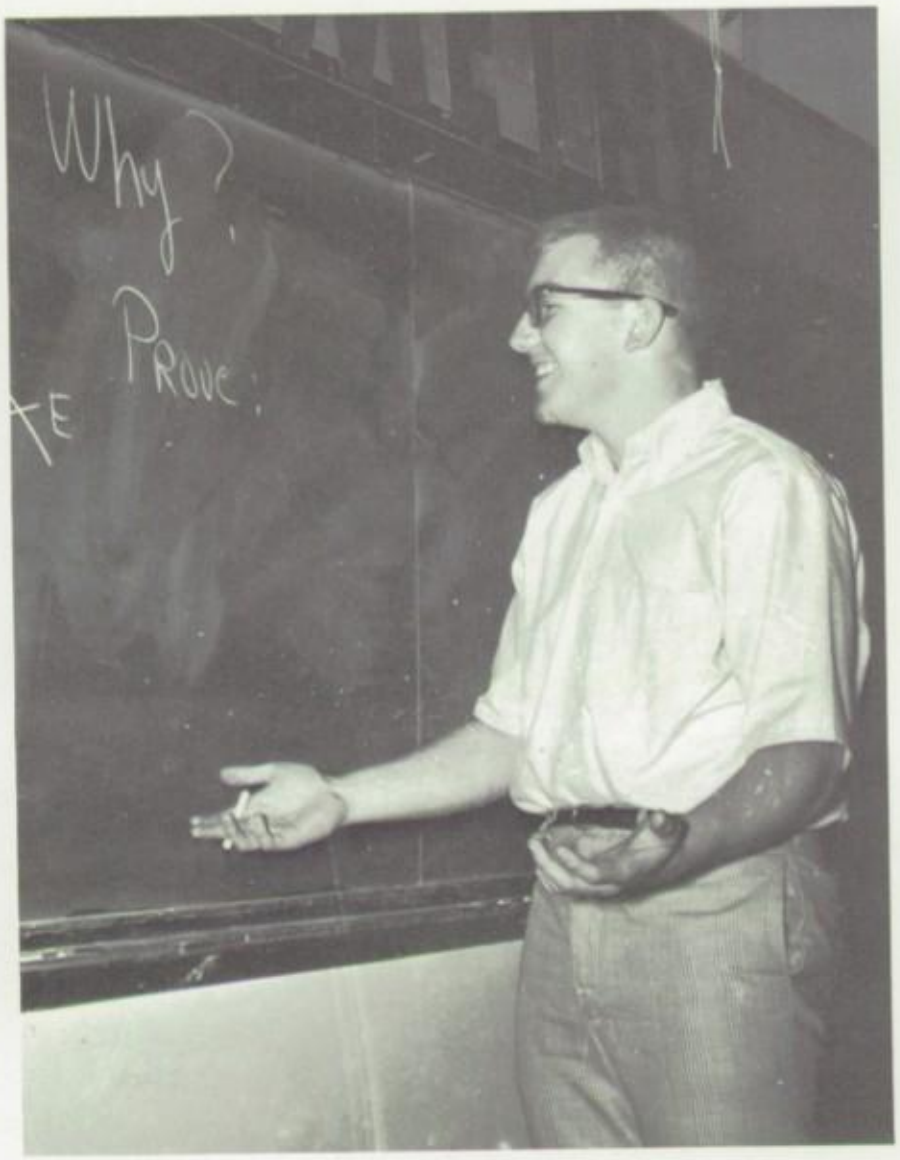
Melanie, you're not going to believe this — but . . .



Mr. George Leonovich



Mathematics



Prove what?

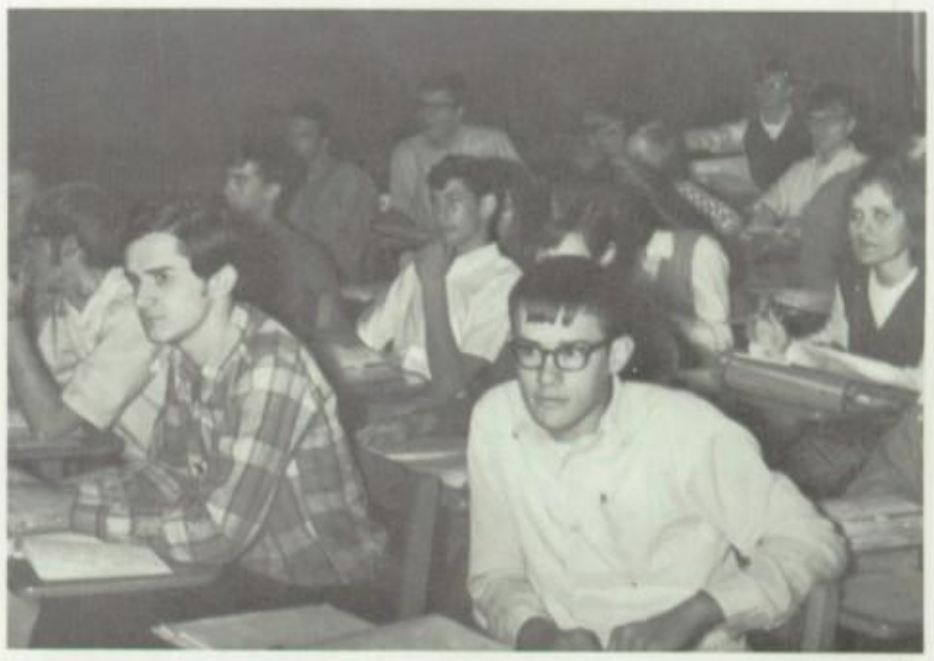
Geometry sure makes me hungry.

Tell it like it is, Joanne.

Mission Impossible . . . The Science Department

What the heck does Physics have to do with being a farmer?

"Should I take that pumpkin or shouldn't I?"



Mr. Ronald Startzel

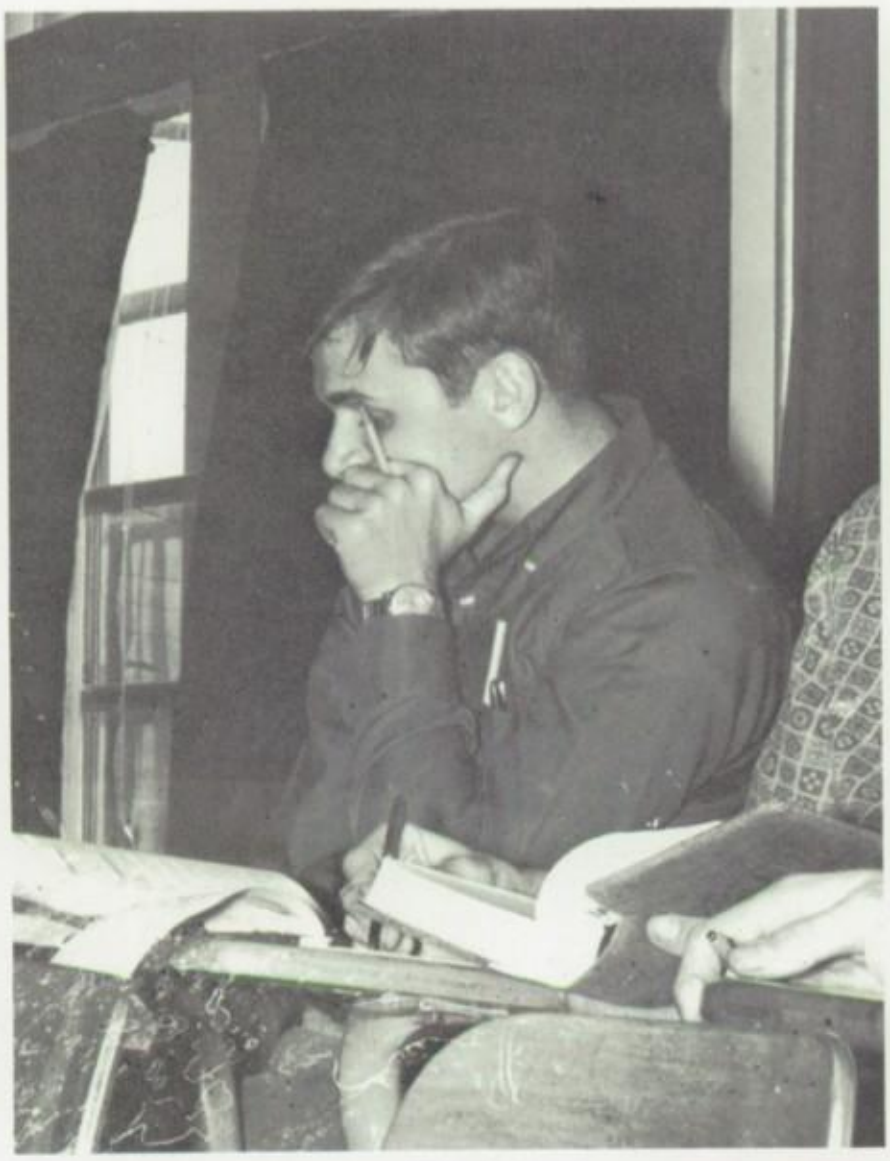
Mr. H. Claude Rhodes

Mr. Timothy Barnes

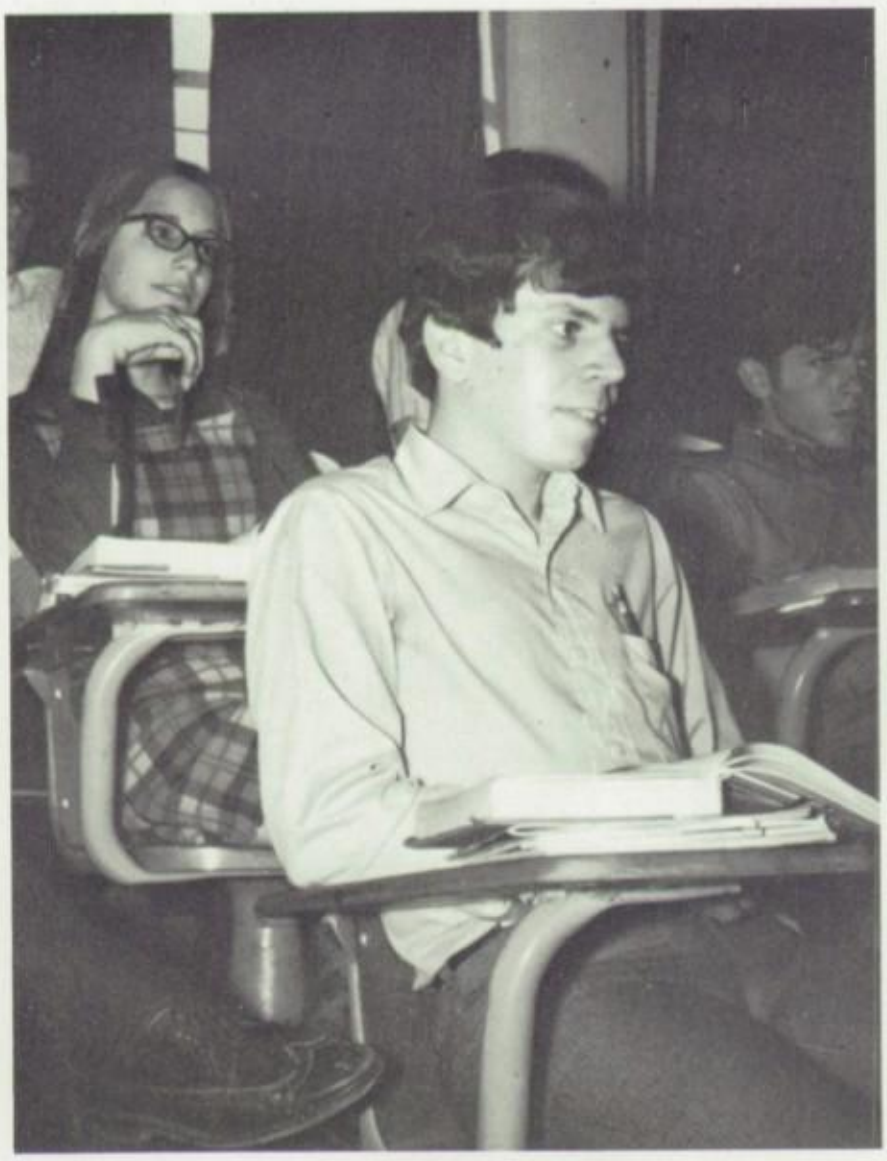
Oh, Mr. Barnes, You're my idol!

Uh — Oh, Henry has that mischievous look on his face again!

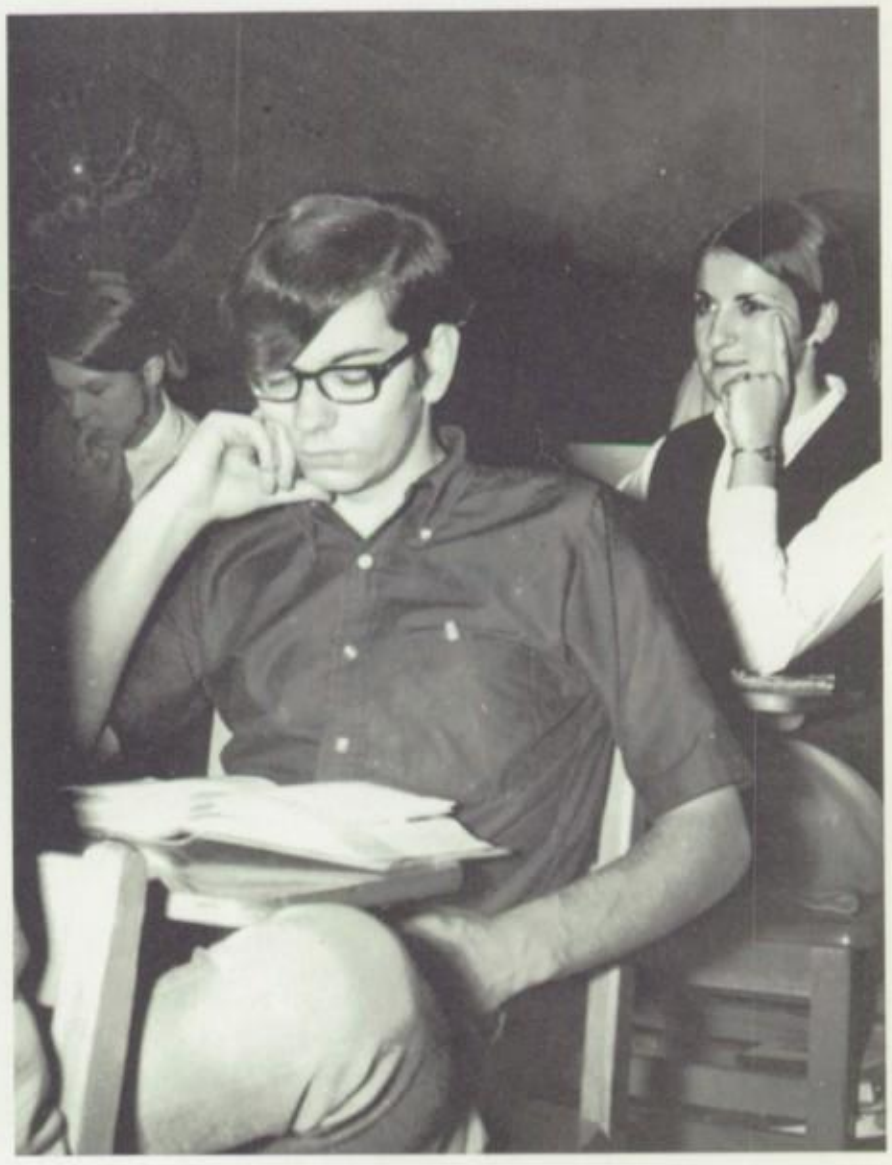
Someday I'll understand you, Mr. Rhodes. (Maybe?!)



Ed, you mean you really listen?



Verrrry interesting, but stupid!



Hard night, Steve? Graz knows!

What do you mean . . . parlez-vous?

I wonder how Mr. Varano fits in that little black box?

Setzen-sie where?

From Those Far Away Places . . .

French & German

Sit up straight, Harry!

Mrs. Virginia Kramer

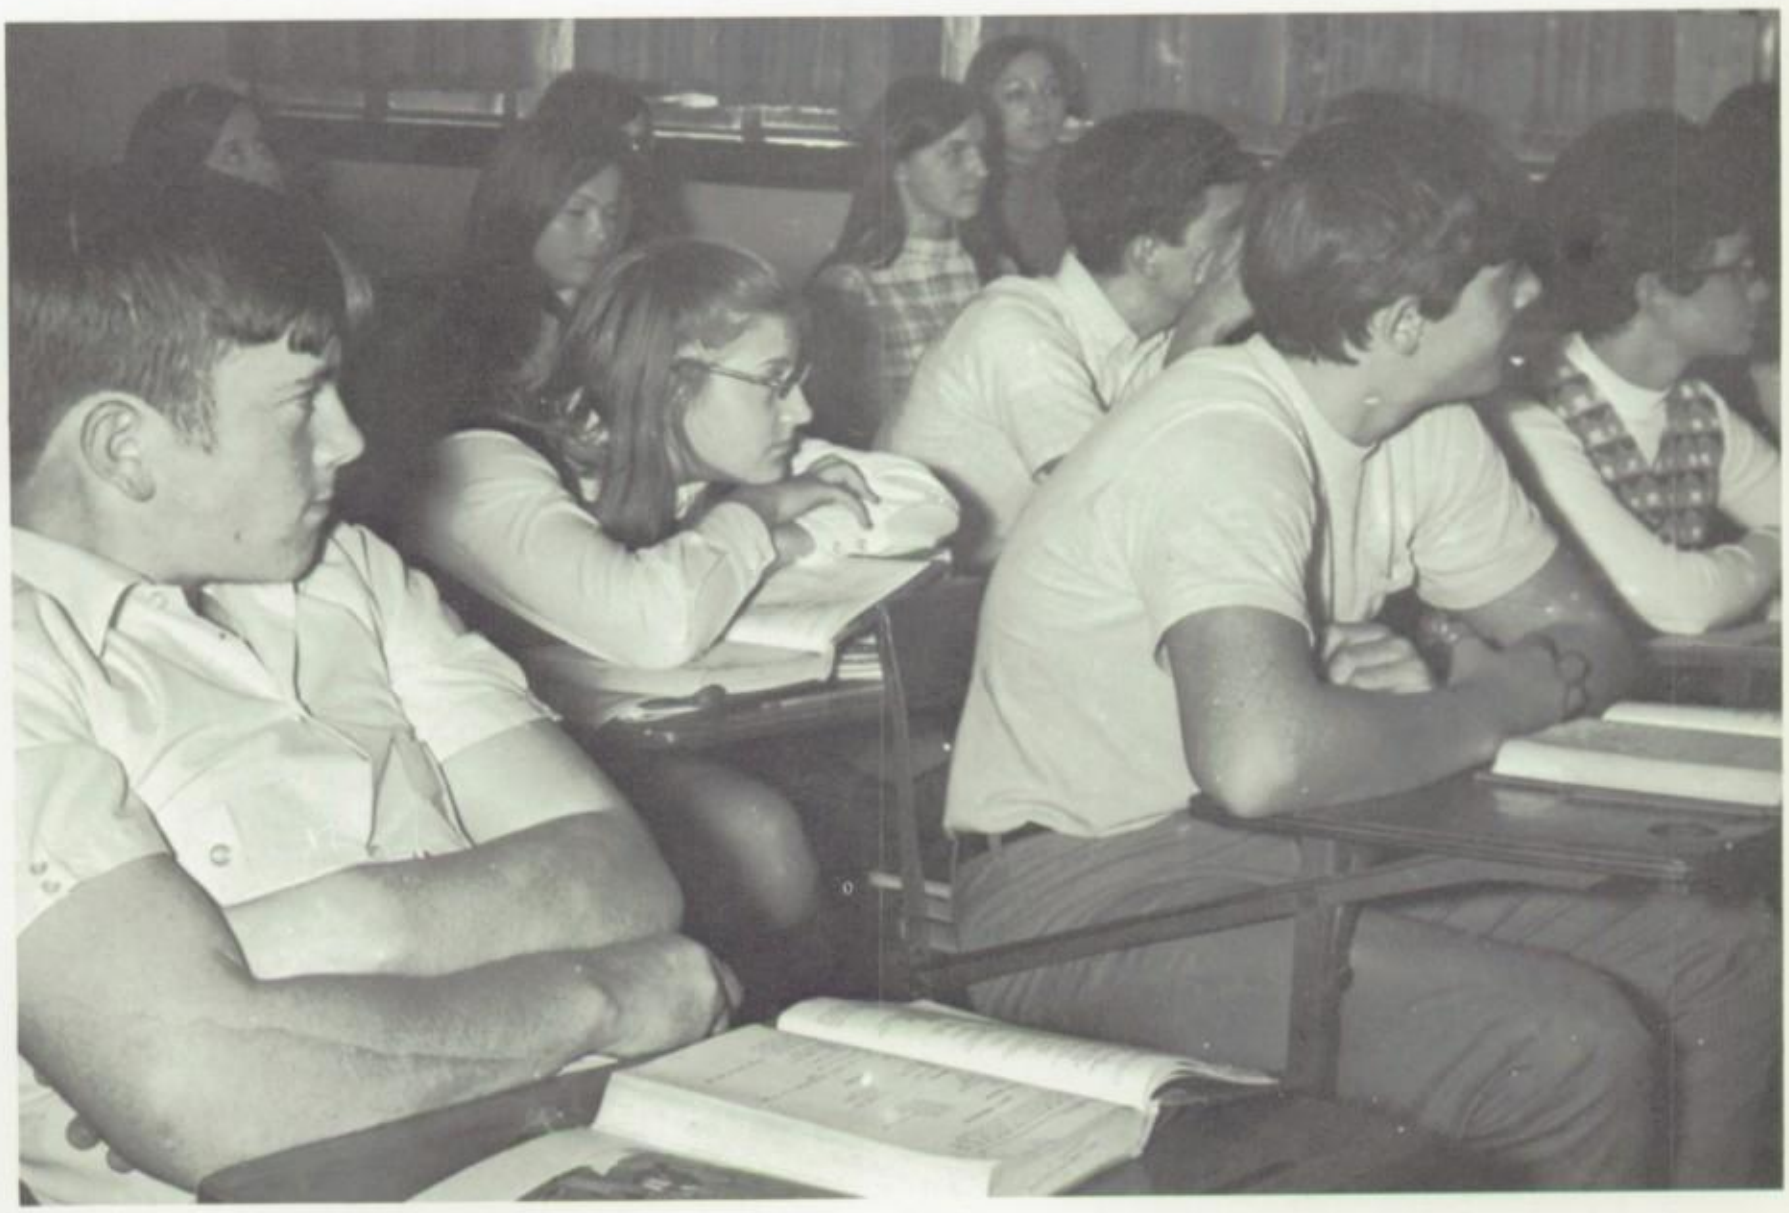
Mr. Dennis Bender

Mrs. Eleanor Barnes

I wonder if Aldolf Hitler started this way?

GRRR-r-r-r!

A typical German class . . . (wake up, Bev!)



How To Become An Office Girl In Three Easy Lessons . . .

The Commerical Department

Mr. Walter Chesney

Hey Cindy, you're supposed to be typing . . . not writing!

Oh! you've got to be kidding!

Look Ma, no hands!

At this rate, I'll never become a secretary!

Miss Helen Carroll

Mr. Michael Dormer

Miss Emily Arcikosky

No peeking!!!

Future Secretary of America

Our class had 50% more erasures . . . right Carol?

Fred starts a new thing — topless gym class.

I don't use new Ban, and . . .

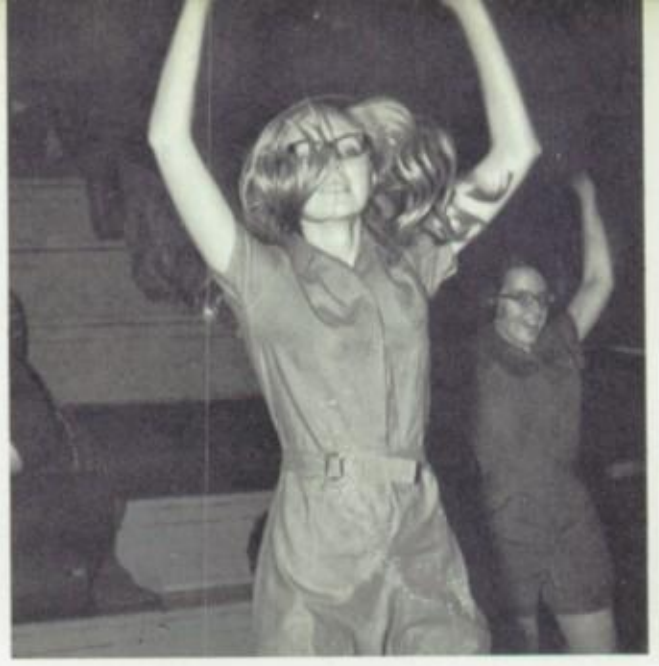
Yoga, anyone?

Dig Those Aching Muscles

Physical Education

We're observing.

Miss Sandra Edwards



Oh . . . it was about that big.

S . . . T . . . R . . . E . . . T . . . C . . . H!

Gee, the girls work harder than this!!

Boy — I hope they don't put this in the yearbook!

Mr. Alfred Santos

Up against the wall!?!

One of the quiet days in the MCAHS library.

Miss Carol J. Hoskins

Those Book On The Shelves . . .

The Library

I never thought they'd put that word in the dictionary.

It's A Happening . . .
The Art Department

Mr. George McFee

C'mon you guys, I was here first!

M.C.A.'s own Leonardo da Vinci

New shirt, Tom?

Eavesdropping, Judy?

Slim, how would you like a nice red stripe across your belly?

The Chrome Spinners

Mr. Theodore Andrulevich

"We got a radiator this year, next year we get the motor."

One of the rare moments in Democracy — Wags seems to be thinking!

The World In His Hand . . . . . Democracy . . .

Oh No! It's broken — that means "Checkers" for the rest of the year.

If we finish this today, we might get it in by September of '71

Hey, Cart! None of that in the halls!

Do you really think we should leave, or should we stay here till the end of the third period?

It's Time For The Harvest Moon Review

Wouldn't you know Mr. Swatski's class would have something to do with T.V.?

Now Ricky thinks he's the "big cheese"!

Boy, Shellie, you really turn Tommy off!!!

Bibs, you're supposed to be dancing, not directing!

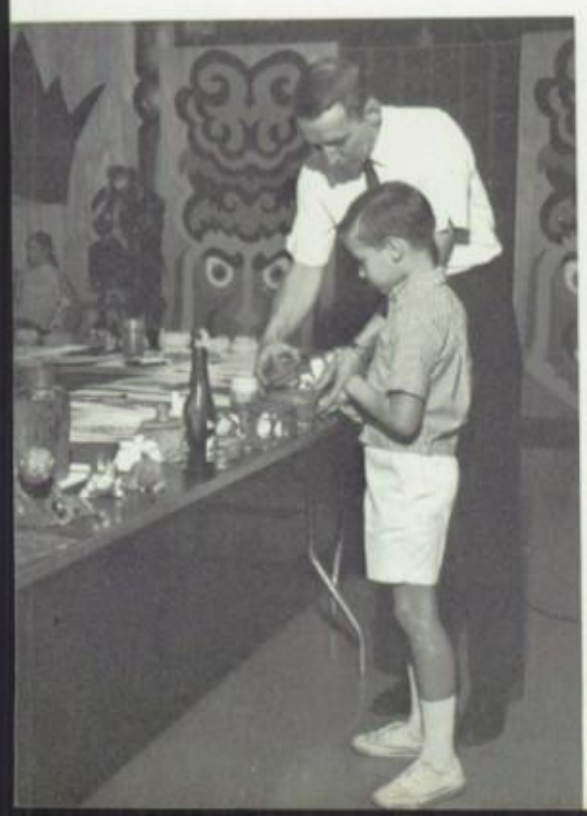
The Annual ART EXHIBIT . . .

Do we get extra credit for this?

A moment of admiration after a hard day's work.

"Made in Japan"?????????

Our boss "Boss" gives Charlie "T-Bone" the word.



Young and old enjoy the exhibit.

How about taking the nail out of my finger now?

What's so interesting Shellie?

Sure beats the Teen Palace!

2 + 2 = 5?? C'mon, you're pullin' my leg

I wish I had a tall, cold glass of . . .

Detention for what?

The crowd stands in awe! (Ah!)

'This typewriter will self-destruct in 5 seconds".

This chalk has all the wrong answers in it!!
